

BANDINFO 2025

Back in 2001, the two ex-Chandelier members Tom Jarzina (drums) and Stephan Scholz (bass & guitar) together with Julia Graff (vocals) helped ELLEVEN to take its first steps. Armin Riemer (keys) and Carsten Hütter joined a short time later and the band was complete. For the first album INSIGHT, Roger Weitz (Flying Circus, Thin Crow) not only engineered the album, but also played bass on it. The debut album was released in 2007 and immediately made it onto the “Eclipsed” magazine sampler. The atmospheric, rocking progressive pop received good reviews in Germany and other European countries. Professional and private reasons repeatedly forced the band to restructure. After Tom Jarzina had left the band in 2009, another Chandelier member joined on drums for the new material and the second album: Herry Rubarth became part of the band in 2010.

The changes ELLEVEN went through during this time also influenced the idea behind the second album, TRANSFICTION.

The band's current lineup has been together for about two years now, and the third album also had to deal with personal issues. For a while, Julia Graff and Armin Riemer were just the two of them in the rehearsal room, working on new songs. With Carsten Hütter back, the new guy on bass, René Lozynski, and finally Michael Hahn on drums, they finally formed the compositions into the current longplayer. 8030 is an album that talks about all the ups and downs of a relationship. It's atmospheric, emotional, and full of power and passion.

ELLEVEN are:

Armin Riemer (Piano / Synth / Vocoder / Moog)

Carsten Hütter (Gitarre)
